

BILL MECK

Since before the turn of the century Bill Meck has been bringing Kentuckians their weather with an award-winning blend of humor, education, and accuracy. During that time, he's seen well over 100,000 Kentucky kids with his Bill's Weather 101 program which takes the science of meteorology and makes it simple and fun for the students to understand. He's also emceed numerous events including the Lexington Music Awards, Lakeside Live, The Kentucky Rose of Tralee, various galas and fundraisers, as well as being a featured reader with the Lexington Philharmonic.

Bill's dream of being a TV weather guy began around the age of 6, and he has the books that he shows at every Bill's Weather 101s to prove it but became a reality at the age of 20 when he went on the air as morning and weekend weatherman for WOI-TV in Des Moines. After graduating from Iowa State, he moved to Spartanburg, South Carolina, where he met his wife, Connie. He's also worked in Roanoke and Indianapolis before finding his home in Lexington.

Away from the station, Bill is an Advisory Board member for the Salvation Army and also chairs the annual LemonAid Days. He's served on committees at the local and state level regarding severe weather safety.
