

BRIGADOON State Nature Preserve is a mixture of mature woods and old fields bordering the backwaters of Barren River Reservoir in Barren County. Named by the former owners for the mythical Scottish village that appears from the mists once every hundred years, the unique character of the preserve does bring to mind the sense of being someplace special.

The preserve was part of a 1,000-acre land grant given to John Renfro, one of Virginia's Revolutionary War veterans. Renfro and his descendants settled along what was then known as Skegg's Creek and derived their livelihood from the heavily forested land. In addition to farming, the family made coffins and furniture as a means of income.

Since the early 1800's, the landscape has been altered significantly. Today Brigadoon is encircled by farmland, and the Barren River Reservoir has overtaken Skaggs (formerly Skegg's) Creek. The preserve's forested ravines contain some old growth stands of beech and tulip poplar, adding credence to reports that a portion of the Renfro's forested land was never commercially logged.

A large portion of the old growth located along a narrow slope above the reservoir on the preserve's northern boundary was disturbed by a tornado in the mid-1970's. This area is recovering, but the difference in age and condition remains noticeable. The majority of the forest is intact, which helps keep species diversity high. Life sustaining springs feed the creeks, even in the driest summers. The woods abound with colorful spring wildflowers, and over 120 species of birds have been observed throughout the preserve.

The Nature Conservancy was instrumental in assisting with the protection of the original tract at Brigadoon in 1985. A bequest of additional acreage from Dr. Russell Starr was dedicated by KSNPC in 2001.

A one-mile hiking trail is open to the public at Brigadoon State Nature Preserve. The trail is of moderate difficulty and runs through ridge tops, mature forest and scenic ravines. The preserve is open to foot traffic from sunrise to sunset. Please be respectful of Brigadoon State Nature Preserve and follow the rules.
